SIX DIVORCES ARE GRANTED IN COURT OF COMMON PLEAS

Thirty Members of Bar Were Present When Trial List Was Called

ACTS ON PETITION

Court Names Abe F. Patterson Constable at Doylestown To Succeed Jas. P. Welsh

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 7.—Six divorces were handed down yesterday in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks county. Thirty members of the Bar were present when the trial list of the October term was called off.

The divorces were as follows:

Arthur MacDonald, Yardley, against Della Fitzgerald MacDonnell, Newtown, desertion.

Clifford McIlhenny, Falls township, against Mildred McIlhenny, Middletown township, desertion.

Elizabeth Staub, Morrisville, against Edward Staub, 159 North Hamilton township, N. J., desertion.

William Black, Bedminster township, against Anna K. Black, 1123 East Wilt street, Philadelphia, desertion.

Howard G. Hoagland, Middletown township, against Mary E. Hoagland, 734 South Pennsylvania avenue, Morrisville, desertion.

Thomas P. Dilorio, Woodbourne, against Frances M. Dilorio, Langhorne, cruel and barbarous treatment.

Real Estate Board To Discuss B. & L. Ass'n's

The Bucks County Real Estate Board is devoting its entire evening of October 15th to the Building and Loan Industry of Bucks County. Every Building and Loan Association in the county and anyone interested in Building and Loan work is invited to the meeting, which will be preceded by a dinner at 5.30 p. m. at the Fountain House, Doylestown.

The Bucks County Real Estate Board has a Building and Loan Committee who are devoting their entire efforts to the advancement of the industry in the county and state. This meeting will be held under the direction of this committee and they are endeavoring to bring to the associations of the county complete reports from the 6th Annual Convention of the Pennsylvania Savings and Loan League which was just held at Harrisburg on September 25th, 26th and 27th.

The principal speakers at the meeting on October 5th, will be O. Lewis Ehmann, Jr., past President of the Pennsylvania Savings and Loan League, who will review the program of the convention and will also give a general account of the work done by the research committee of which he is chairman. This committee has been working diligently for several years studying the trends of the building and loan industry.

Fred A. Werner, the newly-elected President of the Pennsylvania Savings and Loan League, will make his first appearance since election at this meeting and he will discuss the future of the building and loan industry in the state and will outline his program for the Savings and Loan League's activities for 1942.

Many other guests from various parts of the State will be present to hear these two addresses.

Miss Mayberry Is Feted By Her Attendants-To-Be

A miscellaneous shower was given last evening Miss Elizabeth Mayberry, Garden street, by her attendants-to-be, the Misses Hannah Rockel, Margaret Stephenson, Bristol; and Miss Elna Madison, Colonia, N. J. The party was held at the Stephenson home on Jefferson avenue. The rooms were decorated in white. Between the living rooms a large white bell was suspended and from the bell hung white ribbons with notes telling where to find the gifts. A yellow umbrella was the table centerpiece; and yellow and green baskets filled with nuts were the favors.

Refreshments were served to: Mrs. John Walterick and children, Mrs. Granville Stephenson and daughter Janet, Mrs. Rose Mayberry, Mrs. Russell Moore, Mrs. William Rockel, Mrs. Forence McLaughlin, Mrs. Roy Jenks, Mrs. Daniel Curran, Mrs. John Dugan, Bristol; Mrs. Etta Mayberry, Mrs. Howard Spangler, Edgely; Mrs. William McCorkle, James McCorkle, West Bristol; Mrs. Emma Reitzel, Morrisville; Mrs. James Mayberry, Sr.; Mrs. James Mayberry, Jr., Mrs. Lester Mayberry, Tullytown.

Inspecting Buildings Here In Fire Prevention Week

Edward A. McIlvaine, inspector for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, Department of Labor and Industry, is in Bristol this week, accompanying chief of Bristol Consolidated Fire Department, Clifford Hagerman, on an inspection of some local buildings.

The two, in their tour of inspection, will watch for fire hazards, and ascertain as to safety measures offered in certain structures.

They will inspect some Bristol factories, school buildings, churches and theatres.

This is part of the observance locally of Fire Prevention Week, which is being marked from October 5th to 11th.

ANNOUNCE RECEPTION

The Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Red Cross will hold an informal reception for Lady Halifax, of England, at the Red Cross headquarters, 511 N. Broad street, Philadelphia, tomorrow between the hours of 2.30 and 3.30. All members of the Red Cross are invited to attend.

Plan For Exchange of Prisoners Collapses

London, Oct. 7.—Plans for exchange of seriously wounded British and German war prisoners collapsed today as a result of what Britain termed a "flagrant breach of faith" by Germany.

And in the port of Newhaven, where German prisoners on hospital ships had been hoping for an end of internment and a sight of their homes, there was sadness and disappointment after days of hope.

Announcement that the plan had failed was made in the House of Commons by Capt. David Margesson, Secretary of State for War. Authorities said the Germans would be disembarked today and returned to internment camps.

Two Trainmen Killed As Bridge Collapses

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 7.—The north leaf of the famous international bridge across the St. Mary's River collapsed today, plunging a freight engine and tender into the river and drowning two trainmen while blocking traffic through two Soo locks.

Although sabotage was discounted, a thorough investigation was ordered by Col. F. T. Cruise, commanding the Sault Ste. Marie military district through which pass ships heavily laden with defense materials.

Engineer Hazen Willis, 50, Gladstone, Mich., and conductor David Monroe, Sault Ste. Marie, were trapped in the engine cab and drowned. Two other trainmen were rescued from the water by Fort Brady soldiers who were guarding the bridge.

Major K. S. Anderson, Soo lockmaster who said the mishap "appears to be an accident," predicted it would be from four to six days before the bridge structure was cleared from the river and normal traffic resumed through this key Great Lake shipping point.

Parade To Be Held Here On the Evening of October 30th

PUBLIC TO PARTICIPATE

One new division will be in the line of parade when the Halloween parade and celebration is held in Bristol on Thursday evening, October 30th. The new division, that of bicycles, is expected to be one of the largest in the parade.

This division was announced last evening when the general committee of the Lower Bucks County Halloween Association, sponsored by the Mill Street Business Men's Association, met at the Legion Home on Radcliffe street. President John Hardy was in charge of the meeting.

Substantial prizes will be awarded in the bicycle division for the best comic and best fancy entries. Prizes will also be given in the five other divisions announced last evening. These divisions include: Fancy—individual and group; comic—individual and group; impersonation—individual and group; organization—lodges, clubs, social groups, Sunday School groups, etc.; float—commercial, industrial and organization which are unaccompanied by marching groups.

The annual canvas for funds for the prizes will occur this Saturday, October 11th. Leaders for the wards have been appointed and include the following: 1st ward, business section, Abe Popkin and J. S. Lynn; 1st ward, other than business section, Wesley Spencer; the leader for the second ward will be announced in a day or two; 3rd ward, Mrs. A. W. Terneson; 4th TULLYTOWN, Oct. 7.—Anyone wishing transportation to card party given by Tullytown Home and School League at the home of Mrs. Fred Watts tonight, is asked to telephone her, Bristol 7449, or notify Mrs. Jessie Mayberry, and meet at the Tullytown post office. Many valuable prizes have been selected, and two-thirds of the players will receive a prize.

TAKE 9,000-MILE TRIP

YARDLEY, Oct. 7.—Mrs. D. Taylor Ivins has returned to her home after spending a few weeks on a motor trip of 9,000 miles to the Pacific coast. She was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. William Fabian, Newtown, and Robert Larue, of Wrightstown.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

With between 40 and 50 persons in attendance and with the president, Mrs. Leonard Wells, in charge, the first meeting of the season of the Solebury Parent-Teacher Association was held in the consolidated school building at Solebury.

The entire meeting was devoted to the transaction of business. With the cooperation of the parents and the school board, the association hopes to grade a part of the school ground and to remove ground from the basement of the school to provide a place for the children to play during inclement weather.

Attendance prizes in the form of paintings loaned by the New Hope Art Galleries will be awarded at each meeting of the association throughout the year. Each month a different painting will be awarded as an attendance prize, and the winner at the meeting last evening was the fourth

HULMEVILLE SPORTSMAN SNOW-BOUND FOR A WEEK

Cyrus E. Smith Finds Days and Nights Dreary on Top of Bull Moose Mountain, Canada

UNUSUAL EXPERIENCE

HULMEVILLE, Oct. 7.—Marooned by snow and dense clouds for seven days and seven nights on the top of Bull Moose Mountain in Northern British Columbia, Canada, was the experience last month of Cyrus E. Smith, a 76-year-old local sportsman.

This horrible predicament, coupled with the fact that on a 26-day saddle trip in search of big game and motion picture material into the wilds of the Canadian mountains he had opportunity to fire but one shot, and had but two days which proved suitable for either hunting or picture taking, made the most recent of such trips by Mr. Smith more or less of a "nightmare."

The long-anticipated hunting trip proved in the end to be more or less of a "sit-down" strike against the elements—the localite sitting alone in his tent for a week, approximately 9,000 feet above sea level, with snow two feet deep outside, clouds so dense all about that visibility was practically nil, and filled with many dreary concerns lowering of food supplies, lack

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Conflict and Confusion

Washington, Oct. 4. THERE has been little stealing of public funds in the three Roosevelt Administrations. Relatively, they have been free from dishonesty, although certainly a record has been set in the exploitation of high public position in ways which clash with any lofty conception of public morality and can be reconciled with none save the lowest standard of political ethics.

ESPECIALLY offensive is the brazenness of the White House favorites, such as Mr. Tommy Corcoran, who after years of furious assault upon the greed of businessmen, seizes the opportunity presented by a great national grade, of which Miss Drager is the teacher.

Mrs. Wells has announced that a meeting of the executive committee will be held at her home on Tuesday evening, October 7th.

The next meeting of the association will be held on Thursday evening, November 6th, at which time a representative of the Bucks County Council of Defense will give a talk.

During a special meeting of Sellersville Borough Council, permission was granted to the United States Gauge Company to lay its new pipe lines from an artesian well to the plant on Clymer avenue.

Mention was made concerning the speeding up of the hook-up because of the drought. However, it is not expected the new pipe line can be laid for two or three weeks because of the delay in the delivery of orders of steel or cast iron pipe.

Another delay may be caused by the delivery of a 10,000 gallon water storage tank which the gauge company must use to obtain its own pressure.

The lines will be connected to the new 630-foot well which the gauge company had drilled last Summer to provide its own supply. The well is expected to supply about 125 gallons per minute.

Sellersville's water situation will remain serious just as long as the gauge company has not connected pipes with its own well. There has been so little rain all Summer that most wells on private properties in this vicinity have either gone dry or are dangerously low. It would take about one week of rain to fill the catch basin to its full capacity of 21,000,000 gallons.

Officers and directors of the Newtown branch of the Needlework Guild of America held a meeting at the Newtown Friends' Home. Mrs. Leroy Subers, the first vice-president, presided in the absence of Mrs. Walter H. Mohr.

Several items of business were discussed and arrangements were made for the gathering to be held Thursday, November 13th. Newtown branch has 28 directors.

The following committees were named to have charge of the annual gathering: program, Mrs. Horace Watson, Miss Elizabeth Palmer and Mrs. H. Griffin Miller; publicity, Mrs. Reuben P. Kester, Mrs. Orville Courtney and Mrs. Charles Goodnow; auditors, Mrs. Leroy Subers and Mrs. Wallace Murfit; receiving, Mrs. Clarence Waugh, Mrs. H. Improvement Ass'n Plans To Discuss Proposed Borrowing

EDGELY, Oct. 7.—A regular meeting of the Edgely Improvement Association was held in the Headley Manor Fire Co. station, last evening. The committee appointed to attend the last meeting of Bristol Township school board made their report.

Plans were made to conduct a meeting in the Headley Manor Fire Co. station on October 16th, at eight p. m., at which time Charles H. Boehm, superintendent of Bucks County schools, will be present, as will also the board of school directors of Bristol Township. It will be of interest to every taxpayer to attend this meeting, it is announced, as the group will discuss the proposed increase in the district's borrowing capacity.

The Association has received complaints in regards to automobiles and trucks speeding through Edgely, and some discussion took place on this subject.

BRISTOL ADULT CLASSES HUM WITH ACTIVITIES

300 Men and Women Swarm To Studies; 13 Courses Being Given

SCHOOL'S SECOND YEAR

The Bristol High School building was humming like a defense plant last evening as approximately three hundred men and women of all ages came back to the classrooms for the first sessions of the Bristol Adult School.

Thirteen courses, including four new ones, are being given on Monday and Tuesday evenings this year, an increase over last year's curriculum which listed 12 courses. Twenty courses were offered, but insufficient registration caused the dropping of seven. Most persons who had registered for any of these transferred to another course.

Last night the street was lined with parked cars and inside the building the corridors were a medley of the sounds of instruction. Most classroom doors were open because of the heat, and from one issued the tentative and spasmodic clatter of typewriter keys as the beginners faced the keyboard for the first time. Down the hall in Spanish class the group answered questions in unison with a sibilant "SI, si, si."

From other rooms came the voices of instruction and the ever-present scratch of chalk on blackboard—though

Attempt Made Here to Steal Three Auto Trucks

Auto thieves attempted early today to steal cars here but for some reason did not meet with success.

William Lupkin, 343 Dorrance street, this morning found that his truck which was in the garage in the rear of his place of business had been tampered with. An effort had been made to get the truck out of the garage but it did not meet with success.

The two trucks of Culura Brothers, Dorrance and Pond streets, which are kept in a garage near the Lupkin garage, was also moved. Both trucks were gotten out of the garage into the alley between Dorrance and Washington streets.

The police were notified early this morning that "something strange" was going on in the alley and officers in the police radio car went to the scene. It is thought that perhaps the officers frightened off the thieves.

Miss Lillian Reynolds Is Guest of Honor at Shower

Miss Lillian Reynolds, Edgely, was the guest of honor at a lingerie shower given by her co-workers in the office of Manhattan Soap Company. The affair was held Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Howard English, Buckley street. The gifts, placed upon a table, were concealed by a doll dressed as a bride.

The dining table was attractive with a centerpiece of yellow flowers and yellow candles. Favors were small baskets of candy. An accordion solo was given by Miss Madeline Alpin; vocal solo by Mrs. English; and piano solos by Mrs. A. Hammond, Mrs. B. Smith and Miss Evelyn Buck. A mock wedding added to the evening's pleasure.

The invitation list included: Mrs. A. Hammond, Miss Anne Shogda, and Miss Evelyn Greenwood, Edgely; Mrs. Nicholas Marino, Mrs. Walter Bartle, Mrs. John Powers, Jr., Mrs. Louis Simonangelo, Mrs. Howard English, Miss Evelyn Buck, Bristol; Mrs. B. Smith and Miss Betty Boylan, Philadelphia; Mrs. Floyd Grey, Princeton, N. J.

A supper was served.

BRISTOL WILL HAVE AN AIR RAID TEST DURING THIS MONTH

Intended As Try-Out of Actual Machinery of Enemy Air-Raid Warning

FOR EASTERN STATES

Every Dis't Chief To Contact Recruits at Once; Assign Locations

The U. S. Army air raid tests in which Bucks County will participate between October 9th and 16th are intended primarily as a try-out of the actual machinery of enemy air-raid warning, Earl D. Blair, county air-raid warden, said today.

"The civilian population will not take any direct part, except by local arrangements," he explained. "The main object is to determine how efficiently the alarms are received at the county alarm box and transmitted in turn to strategic spots throughout the county."

Every district chief in Bristol borough should at once get in touch with his recruits, assign them to their location, and be prepared to answer an emergency call which is going to take place in this area, according to plans now being worked out, sometime between October 9th and 16th. The alarm for the air-raid tests, and how it will be sounded, will be announced later.

"Each district chief in the lower Bucks County area is urged to call in his recruits at once, and give them their instructions by letter or cards as to the posts to which they have been assigned," said Bucks County detective Russo today, who is Lower Area Chief.

Those who do not have cards may procure them from either chief of police of Bristol borough, Linford Jones, or from Mr. Russo. These cards are to be held by the recruits who will turn them over to the chiefs of the tests who will visit each post upon the occasion of the "black-out."

It is very important that the district chiefs have their districts thoroughly organized at once, so that each district

Men Pack Lunches For Women at Unusual Party

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Peterson, New Buckley street, were hosts to friends on Friday evening.

Late in the evening, lunch boxes were given to the men, each box containing a number. The women present were given corresponding numbers. A buffet supper was arranged on the dining table, and from this the men packed a lunch, and presented it to the woman who had the same number. A prize for the best arrangement of the packed lunch was given to Samuel Rogers.

Those present: Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Warrick, Tacony; Miss Louise Adams, Burlington, N. J.; Edward Myatt, Florence, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ballinger, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rogers.

Three Babies Baptized In Newportville Church

NEWPORTVILLE, Oct. 7.—On Sunday morning in Newportville Community Church—Presbyterian, the Rev. Jacob A. Long brought the message. The Lord's Supper was observed in conjunction with World Communion Day. New church hymnals were dedicated, these being given by a few members and the Rev. Harvie, of Newtown.

The following babies were baptized: Catherine Frances Oldham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Oldham; Ethel Mae Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Clarke; and Robert Frederick Kohler, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kohler.

Detailed History Given Of U. Makefield Township

WASHINGTON CROSSING, Oct. 7.—A detailed history of Upper Makefield Township was presented by Miss Margaret R. Slack, at a meeting of Upper Makefield Liberty Club, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred VanHise, here, on Friday evening.

Miss Slack commented upon the early settlers, the schools and their history and prominent men and women who were born in Upper Makefield township, and told how George Washington crossed the Delaware river into Upper Makefield township.

The business session was in charge of the president, Nelson MacKissic, and at that time committee reports were presented. Representing the agricultural committee, Robert T. Ely spoke of a radio program which is of unusual interest to farmers. The report of the domestic science committee was given by Mrs. William C. Kirkbride, and Mrs. Odessa Long reported for the floral committee. The legislative report was presented by J. Cooper Pidcock.

The Rev. Mr. Weer, pastor of the Thompson Memorial Presbyterian Church, announced the next meeting of the club will be held in Fellowship Hall of that church on November 7th, when a representative of the Bell Telephone Company will show motion pictures.

ARSENALS ALWAYS DRAB

The streets of America are destined within a brief period to give testimony to the fact that this nation is actively engaged in the struggle of the democracies against the totalitarian world. From OPM comes two announcements that indicate this clearly.

Not only will December auto production be cut 48.4 per cent from the 1940 level, but so-called "bright work" and other ornamental but non-functioning parts of automobiles, which absorb large quantities of chrome and other defense metals, soon will be banned. No date has been set for the latter move, but it is indicated that auto manufacturers will be requested to eliminate such trimmings voluntarily.

Obviously, it is not pleasant to contemplate American streets and highways deprived of some of their gaudy show. Americans are accustomed to see myriad new and shining automobiles on the streets each year; they expect to behold them displaying new departures in styling, novel and beautiful trimmings. The glamor unlooked for will be missed, and the scene may bring heaviness of heart to many.

BUILDING BOOM

According to a report issued by a building and engineering contract statistical service, business in those lines broke all records during August. The total was $760,000,000. The previous record was held by May, 1928, when the total was $667,000,000.

Although industrial plant construction accounted for most of the increase, residential building awards were up 51 per cent from August of last year. It will be noted that these are August figures. As a rule the high rate is reached during May, when the spring and summer building seasons are planned.

Defense is the main business now in these fields, but as the defense industrial job progresses, the demand for defense housing will increase and material will become available to push residential building. These indications point to a prolonged boom limited in breadth only by the supply of material.

Emergency conditions have compelled the country to go as far as possible at this time without much regard for the future. It is a condition that cannot be avoided if the truth about the world situation is correctly weighed and considered. It means business and employment for those with the aggressiveness to make hay while the sun shines.

The fate of the Neutrality Act demonstrates anew that neutrality is always more popular in time of peace than in time of war.

Bristol Will Have An Air-Raid Test During This Month

trial will be prepared to participate in the tests which will be given under the direction of United States Army officials.

According to word from Ralph E. Flinn, chief air-raid warden of the State Council of Defense, the tests will extend from Boston to Norfolk, and will include 19 eastern counties in Pennsylvania. The necessary alarm box for each of these counties has been installed and linked up by wire with Mitchell Field, L. I., the point at which warnings are originated.

In addition to the alarm system, the army exercises also will test the army's own air defenses, including such functions as pursuit aviation, anti-aircraft artillery, and searchlights.

At least four groups of pursuit planes and two or three bombardment groups and reconnaissance units will take part, and these planes will fly an estimated 1,000,000 miles during the test. The bombing planes, acting as "enemy" aircraft, will be spotted by trained civilian observers, whose reports will be flashed to Mitchell Field, and from there to the proper alarm centers.

The following is contained in a letter directed to the Bucks County Council of Defense, dated September 29, 1941, from T. S. Walmsley, Acting Deputy Director, Office of Civilian Defense, Washington, D. C.:

"Colonel Burn has shown me the statement of Activities of the Bucks County Council of Defense.

"It is a comprehensive plan, well adapted to your county and closely coordinated with national policy. The extent to which organization and enrollment have been completed is certainly cause for congratulations to the Bucks County Council of Defense."

The Bucks County Council of Defense is also in receipt of a letter from the headquarters of the Third Area, U. S. A. informing the Council that Colonel Clifton Lisle, Colonel of Infantry, will be present at the Air Raid Warning, Blackouts, and Emergency Police tests to be held in Bucks County. His purpose, we understand, will be to make an inspection and report.

One of Bucks County's most distinguished women, Pearl S. Buck, of near Dublin, celebrated novelist and the first American woman to win the Nobel Award in Literature, will speak at the North Atlantic Regional Conference of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs at Doylestown on Saturday, October 18th.

Mrs. Buck will speak at the luncheon-meeting at the Doylestown Inn, with the Soroptimist Club of Bucks county as the host organization.

There will be professional, women from the New England states, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and this state, in attendance. The conference will be officially concluded with the closing of the afternoon program, but for the benefit of the Soroptimists who have quite a distance to travel before reaching their homes a buffet supper will be served at the country club in the evening.

Miss Sophia Bliven, head of the women's division of the Penn Mutual Insurance Company of Philadelphia, will be in charge of the afternoon activities.

Miss E. Helaine Littleman, president of the Soroptimist Club of Bucks county, is the chairman of general arrangements, and Mrs. Martha S. Woolley, another Bucks Soroptimist, will serve as the mistress of ceremonies.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

George Murphy is momentarily following in his father's footsteps—but never in his life could the famous "Mike" Murphy, Olympics coach and University of Pennsylvania sports mentor, have followed in his son's.

George, one of Hollywood's most nimble-footed dancers, plays a young football coach in "Hold That Co-ed," which opened yesterday at the Bristol Theatre, with John Barrymore, Marjorie Weaver, Joan Davis and Jack Haley co-featured.

"Dance Hall" is also at the Bristol.

GRAND THEATRE

Ring the bell once again in its true interpretation of American family life, "Life Begins for Andy Hardy" offers entertainment plus at the Grand Theatre. This latest venture, which finds Andy facing life on his own away from family ties and the protective influences of Carvel, results in a sobered young man—Andy who at last realizes that living constitutes something more than class dances and football games.

The plot in brief deals with the problem facing the Hardys after Andy's graduation from high school. Whether he should go on to college to study law, or go out on his own is a situation left entirely up to him by his parents. He decides to leave home for a month and work in New York. With this experience he feels he will be able to make a wiser decision. Once again his path crosses that of Betsy Booth, and once again Betsy helps him out of an embarrassing situation. What happens in the city can best be explained by the fact that Andy, after his month has elapsed, chooses a college career.

RITZ THEATRE

Movies now at the Ritz Theatre, Croydon, include "Dance Hall," featuring Cesar Romero; and "Robbers of the Range" with Tim Holt.

SENATE STENOGRAPHER by MAXWELL THAYER

SYNOPSIS

Senator Jeffrey Murray, secretly discussing under-cover plans to put over a monopoly bill in the Legislature, is overheard by Gale Holoway, pretty small-town girl, looking for a position. Her accidental eavesdropping brings her a $250 monthly job as Murray's secretary. Visiting Nan Parkinson, political hostess, Gale is bumped into a swimming pool by Marie Gibbins, deprived of her job by Gale. Joe Nash, Governor McKurth's handsome secretary, rescues her. Later, Murray is furious when he finds Gale going through his secret files, but his ire vanishes and he insists she accept an apartment, adjoining his, rent free, as he sometimes works at night and wants her within call. Playing bridge at the Parkinson home, Gale wins $40 as partner to Cedric Colburn, powerful lobbyist who, has much to gain if Murray's bill is passed. Opposing them are the men who were discussing the bill with Murray, Assemblyman Tom Olmstead and Jim Drake, corporation representative. In the privacy of Nan's boudoir, when Gale tells her hostess she likes to play bridge with Colburn, Nan retorts: "I'm afraid there isn't much you could do about it if you didn't. He's a stubborn man. Perhaps that's why he's gone so far." Returning to the living room, Gale overhears Colburn marveling over her and saying "... a smart girl like this one could turn the trick."

CHAPTER TWELVE

They were in the "foreign section" of town... the Japanese, Chinese, Filipino colonies. There were all sorts of people about, all colors and sizes; a new world right in the Old American town.

"I never dreamed that we had this foreign section," Gale said. "Many people don't," Joe replied. "Some of the people down here have never been out of the sector. It's a busy and interesting neighborhood, but you can find considerable vice down here."

"Don't they raid it?" she asked, still twisting and turning to watch the strange shops and people.

"They raid spasmodically. They can clean up a vice den but it comes right back to life again. So they've had given up. They let the old town run itself. You see that place we just passed?" He nodded his head toward a darkened store front.

"That's a Chinese gambling joint; no one allowed there but Chinese."

"You mean it's an exclusive club?" She was amused.

"Yes, in a sense, for while your laundry man and mine may belong, we can't even enter it, even if we had thousands of dollars to burn."

"And other races sometimes accuse the whites of being—exclusive?" Gale laughed.

Joe parked the car before a cafe and they went in.

"They were escorted to a corner table by a large man who knew Nash and who bowed and smiled and gestured as he made them welcome."

Their meal was delicious and both ate, scarcely saying a word. They hesitated between bites to smile across the table and once or twice Joe reached over and patted her hand.

"I'm sleepy," said Gale later.

"Like a kitten that has just lapped

ped up her warm milk," Nash chided.

"What I need is air."

"Me, too," Joe said.

So they left the restaurant.

As he was starting the car, Joe suggested they drive along the river road and she readily agreed.

They hummed along the road which winds and turns like a great concrete snake, following the silent river. Moonlight glittered on the water and now and then a tug, its dim lights like eyes looking out at them, passed up the stream, leaving white bubbles in its wake.

Gale was happier during that drive than she had been in years. The world seemed so bright. She was still happy when they returned to her apartment. She invited Joe to come in but he refused, saying he knew she was sleepy and she let it go at that.

She was still happy the next morning as she followed the gravelled walks through Capitol Park toward the office.

Murray was more than genial, too. Swiftly, he dictated his letters, pausing only now and then to light his cigar and to look out the window with thought-filled eyes as he sought to turn a phrase in his replies.

Suddenly he remarked, "We're giving an important dinner party tonight for a group of senators, their wives and friends."

"Yes?" she queried politely.

"It's to be at the Silver Bowl. We've invited most of the members of my committee which has my bill before it for consideration." He puffed on his cigar and glanced out the window.

"I expect to find out how they are going to vote and Colburn expects you to help me."

Gale couldn't keep the annoyance out of her voice. "And when was all this decided?"

"Last night, Colburn had his secretary make the arrangements."

"I wasn't consulted, nor even asked," Gale demurred gently.

"Now, now," the Senator sought to soothe, "Colburn does things like that and there isn't much we can do about it. However," and his eyes twinkled, "if you'd care to complain to him about his way of doing things, go right ahead."

After a pause, Gale said the same thing that women have been saying since the first cavewoman sent her man out to chase down a spotted leopard for his skin. It was: "I haven't a thing to wear."

Murray guffawed. "I bet Colburn you'd say that and he bet you were different." He reached in his pocket and pulled out a wallet, took two one hundred dollar bills out, and handed them to her. "Here, go get an outfit that will knock their eyes out. That's expense money."

For Gale, that afternoon's shopping was a pleasure, a joy. She had the money, and she was ordered to spend it to beautify herself.

Into the town's most exclusive dress shop Gale paraded, feeling a spirit of importance rush through her veins as she explained her desires.

Seated upon a brocade lounge, she was being shown those models whose simplicity of style and perfection of line are always the envy of women less smartly clad.

The gown she finally selected, a black chiffon velvet with a halter neckline, was molded to her body.

With the dress selected, the rest was easy. It took only seconds to buy two dainty rhinestone crescents to pin in her hair. A dream of a little pouch evening bag, a cloud of chiffon for a hankie, and just the right perfume.

After a quick soft drink, Gale hurried to keep her appointment at the beauty salon. For the first time in her life, Gale was doing something she had always longed to do. She was having everything without consideration of cost: facial, her eyebrows thinned, manicure, pedicure, hot oil shampoo with a very expensive rinse that made her lovely hair even lovelier.

Although the background for this story is authentic, the story itself is entirely fictional and the characters are imaginary. Any similarity of names or characters to real persons, living or dead, is purely accidental.

The hairdresser, delighting in having such a beautiful client, took extra care with each strand of reddish gold. Her coiffure was a masterpiece—soft upward swirls all around her head.

Feeling like a queen, Gale taxied to her apartment. She gave the cabbie an extra large tip, too, just out of pure exuberance.

Gale did not realize it but she was making an unconscious decision to guide its course along a different path than she had ever before considered. She was automatically comparing the old with the new and finding the old wanting in something she suddenly desired passionately.

She thought of marriage, of course, as she had many times in the past but now, instead of just love, she wanted more; she wanted wealth and all the things it entails. She meant to have them; that was fixed in her mind, as firmly fixed as her desire to continue in this life which had been forced upon her.

Gale Holoway was no longer the small-town girl who had come begging for a stenographer's job. She was the gorgeous Gale Holoway, career woman.

With such thoughts in her mind and with all the graciousness of a born hostess, Gale entertained her guests that night at the Silver Bowl. She learned in the course of the evening that the committee generally would approve the monopoly bill, providing Smiley did not lead the opposition.

This, of course, is what the plotters had suspected, and so, when they gathered the next day in Murray's apartment, it was to decide what should be done about Senator Smiley.

It was Olmstead who suggested the idea which was eventually approved.

"A couple of years ago, old Smiley married a very pretty, young girl," Olmstead began, watching for the effects of his words and content to bring as much drama into his speech as possible. "He loves her as only an old man can love a young woman; he worships the ground she walks on."

Deliberately, he lighted a cigarette, inhaled and blew out a cloud of smoke before he was ready to continue. "I have heard from some very good sources that Smiley's wife has a boy friend. Now, if we had more definite information about her and her Romeo, we might be able to do something with Smiley."

"You mean," Gale began, "that Smiley would do anything to avoid a scandal?"

"Exactly!"

Cedric Colburn had been staring at the floor. Now he looked up. "Well, I'll get a couple of detectives to follow her and let me know as soon as they find out anything."

He got to his feet, put his hat on the back of his head and went out the door. Jim Drake followed.

Murray poured himself a drink, offered one to Gale and Tommy and returned to his seat. Each of the trio was busy with inner thoughts.

What a rotten business! Gale thought. They would stop at nothing, strike at any man's weakness, any man who stood in their way.

She recalled the wallet episode and remembered with a twinge that she had accepted an expensive watch from Lobbyist Colburn. Yesterday she had been full of career and money for a future. Today she looked at the watch with disgust.

Tommy's thoughts were upon the young and very desirable Mrs. Smiley. He remembered when he had first met her at the country club dance. She was coldly polite to him, refused every advance he made to her; and then he saw her later in the arms of her Romeo, on the terrace while old Smiley was parading in the men's lounge, spouting his opinions about the destiny of the American people.

But Mrs. Smiley was past, and before him sat an undiscovered woman. He smiled at Gale and asked if he could escort her home. "She only lives next door," Murray remarked, but Tommy insisted on accompanying Gale anyway.

Two Rubber Plants Closed By Strikes

Akron, O., Oct. 7.—The B. F. Goodrich Co., and its Akron subsidiary, the Miller Rubber Co., were closed today by a protest strike as the CIO-United Rubber Workers Union charged that a union organizer had been attacked and beaten at the firm's tire plant in Oaks, Pa.

Nazis Try To Drive Soviet Troops From W. Russia

Berlin, Oct. 7.—A full-scale campaign to drive all Soviet troops out of western Russia before winter sets in got under way today, featured by a major battle north of the sea of Azov.

Foreign military circles in Ankara predicted an imminent invasion of Crimea by sea. Land hostilities north of the sea of Azov, it was indicated, were regarded as a possible feint to cover an over-water invasion from German-held Black Sea ports.

Coincident with violent new Nazi attacks on Tobruk, Suez, and the hitherto untouched vital Soviet industrial center of Rostov-on-Don, military circles in Berlin said the new attack along the entire Russian front far surpassed any previous onslaught during the 16-week old campaign.

Every Russian attempt at counter-attack has failed, it was said. Russian troops attempted a landing at Peterhof, 18 miles from Leningrad, but were beaten back and "paid bloodily" for their adventure, it was said. German forces were said to have destroyed several troop-laden transports and 22 tanks.

Even the most formidable Red centers of resistance are now being singled out for attack, German authorities said, in a determined drive to sweep the Russians far to the east before winter comes.

Countless Panzer divisions, supported by every known land and aerial weapon, are hammering mercilessly at the enemy. Military spokesmen hinted at "entirely new tactics" by means of which the Russian retreat is being turned into "turnout."

SMALL HOUSE--BIG SPACE

This plan, one of a group sponsored by the National Homes Foundation, packs a lot of accommodations on to a small ground area. The rectangular shape and simplicity of partition arrangement keep material and labor costs to a minimum. Without expensive roof framing, the most has been made of the half-story under the pitched roof. The stair divides the second floor into two large rooms, both having convenient access to the first floor bath. As the first floor is a complete living unit, initial outlay may be kept down by leaving the second floor unfinished until needed. In the south, where no basement is needed, a porch beside the kitchen for work space would be desirable. Address the National Lumber Manufacturers Association, 1337 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D. C., mentioning Design L-V-2-NS, for further information.

Alison Skipworth Is To Appear at Yardley

Alison Skipworth, who stars in Yardley Theatre's gala production of Sheridan's classic comedy, "The Rivals," during this week, is one of the great women of the theatre, who has lived through the days of stage glamour in the true sense of the word. She was a celebrated beauty of the court of Edward VII, in England; entered the theatre as understudy to Marie Tempest in "The Artist's Model," came to America as a Frohman star; became the theatrical toast of two continents; and in later years, went to Hollywood and conquered the screen hearts of the world.

Miss Skipworth is assuredly one of the most industrious artists of the theatre. She says, "I have been on the stage 45 years and have never rested 45 weeks." In all, she was associated with motion pictures less than eight years, and in that time made 89 pictures.

Miss Skipworth will play at the Yardley Theatre one of her favored and most successful roles, Mrs. Malaprop, that delightful dowager who is known in English literature for her genius in the humorous misuse of words. Yardley Theatre has surrounded Miss Skipworth with a fine supporting cast, and Mr. Burns introduces a musical background for the famous comedy, which he used to great success in his former revivals. The cast includes Roy Cropper, well-known tenor, as the Irish philanthropist, Sir Lucius O'Trigger; Alice Wellman as Lucy; Wendell Corey as the swash-buckling Captain Jack Absolute; Laurence Hayes as the comic Bob Acres, and Patricia Patten as the adorable Lydia Languish.

LOWER BUCKS COACHES DISCUSS MANY SUBJECTS

(By Jack Gill)

The coaches of the Lower Bucks County scholastic conference met at Langhorne High School last evening and discussed matters of importance pertaining to all sports. A highlight of the confab was the election of John Hoffman, of Morrisville, as president of the organization. Claude Lodge, of Southampton, was chosen as vice-president, and Charles Utz, of Bristol, secretary-treasurer.

A "Little Four" football conference was formed with Langhorne, Fallsington, Bensalem and Newtown composing the group. These three institutions will battle for a special trophy of their own. But Langhorne and Bensalem will still be included in the same group as Bristol and Morrisville.

Jim Doheny announced that Fallsington will play in the "Big Three" basketball league along with Bristol and Morrisville next winter, as well as the Group 2 Jersey loop. Thus Fallsington will face such foes as Allentown, Bordentown, Mt. Holly, Pemberton and Riverside.

Much discussion surrounded the recent difficulty that Bensalem had with fans in the Bristol game. The coaches felt obligated to suggest various ways to eliminate such haphazard conditions. It was felt that Bensalem was not to blame, but rather the outside fans who foment the trouble. New pressy John Hoffman suggested parking cars at least 50 feet from the playing scene. "Most of that game found the boys playing on but one third of the field; the rest were spectators," stated Hoffman. Storm fence secured from Township authorities was suggested by the leader of Morrisville's athletic forces.

Those present at the meeting were: Scott, Utz, De Risi, Doheny, Hoffman, Derrick, Lodge, Kerr, Beck, Bartholomew, Wetherhold and Hahn. A. Kurtz King, superintendent of Bensalem; and R. Klinger, principal of Southampton, were also in attendance.

FORD V-8 BOWLERS DEFEAT BELL TEAM

Ford V-8 bowlers pushed Bell's lower into the cellar by taking 3 rounds. Vince Boccardo was high for Ford's with 554, while Bell's 522 was high for his team.

Burlington took three from J. A. C. to stick right behind Rohm & Haas. Sutton's 549 was high for the winners, while Kendig's 569 was best for J. A. C.

Rohm & Haas held their own by taking three from Bailey's 440. Mike Korkel's 545 was best for the league leaders while Bailey's 538 was best for his team.

Bristol B. C. split even with Badenhausen. O'Boyle's 581 was high for his team, while Jones' 579 was best for his team.

Wood St. School Pupils Conduct Flower Show

The pupils of Wood street school participated in a flower show on Friday afternoon. The blossoms were from their home gardens and 169 entries in nine classes were arranged in the directors' room of the school. Every participant received a ribbon—either blue, red, yellow or white, designating first, second, third or fourth places, respectively. The ribbons and posters for the show were made by the fourth grade, with Mrs. Violet Weigel, teacher.

Judges were: Mrs. John Hilgendorf, remaining at this base for two days.

Edgely, and Mrs. William Bolton, Wood street.

of fire-wood, no forage for the saddle and pack horses.

It was on the 22nd of August that Mr. Smith left his home here for points to the West and North, bound for a spot approximately 800 miles North-West of Edmont. The original saddle trip from Dawson Creek, B. C., was scheduled to cover 21 days, but by the time the full gamut of unusual experiences with weather, trails and animals was run, the party which included the lone sportsman of advanced years, a young Cree Indian, Ralph, 22, as guide, and the Cree's mother, as cook, returned to Dawson Creek five days overdue.

The area in the Rockies in which the hunting was planned, and where the party became marooned, abounded in grizzly bears, moose, caribou, deer, mountain goats, and was also infested with wolves. The pack train pulling out of Dawson Creek, on August 26th, included the trio mentioned above and eight pack horses. Travelling the same trail with them for a few days was another party, including Dr. T. G. Mendenhall and Dr. E. C. Boyer, both of Johnston, and their guide. The latter two hunters and Mr. Smith had become acquainted enroute west by train.

After the first day on the trail and a night of sleep the hunters looked out from the tent flaps to find the ground covered with snow. The following three days had nothing to offer but rain and snow, but the travelling continued. At the end of that portion of the journey the groups encamped at the falls of the Middle Pine River where good fishing was found on one of the two fairly clear days experienced. The trio from Pennsylvania fished for the day, and secured some pictures, the two physicians catching 18 or 20 Dolly Varden trout, ranging from 15 to 26 inches long, and weighing up to eight pounds each. Glancing at two of the fish one of the doctors decided they would be found full of roe, but when slit open a grayling trout, six inches in length, was found in each, the trout being but lately swallowed.

The following day was spent on the trail, with encampment made that night at the foot of Bull Moose Mountain. Everything was wet from the continued snow and rain, not only the travellers and horses, but equipment as well. The men kept to this camp the next day as the storm did not abate, and the following morning decided to risk the climb up Bull Moose Mountain in spite of the steep, slippery trails, made more dangerous than ever. On the top of the mountain, over 5,000 feet above sea level, there was made what proved to be the "permanent" camp for Mr. Smith, the doctors

Tents were pitched in a grove of fir and balsam. There they found game plentiful. Two black bears prowled around the camp, and many mule deer and blue grouse were seen. About eight of the grouse had been carried into camp by the squaw, who on two or three occasions had dismounted, and with her 22 rifle shot the birds, which about as large as big chickens, proved sweet and tender.

The day following the establishment of camp, the three hunters rode with their guides out to what they termed "the home of the goats," and passed this, the second day of fair weather, taking motion pictures. Hundreds of goats were seen as they moved high on the slopes. On the return journey to camp the physicians and guide were in the lead, and as Mr. Smith and the Cree Indian rode along the rim of a high cliff the latter spotted a large grizzly far below. Hurrying to inform the remainder of the party, the localite was told that if he desired it, it was his animal, inasmuch as his guide had spotted it. "Before I got back from tracking that bear, I wished I had never gone down that slope," says Smith in telling of his experience. "Travel was far worse than we thought, as we went up and down those canyons, over rocks, and through brush. When we reached the spot where the grizzly had been, it was gone. On the climb back to where we had tethered the horses, the Cree never stopped. The going was tough, and the weight of my storm suit and my camera, together with the pounding of my heart and shortness of breath in that high altitude, made me wonder if I would ever make the grade. And to top it all, night was coming on. I knew the doctors and guide had continued, and I doubted if the horses would remain fast where tethered, so anxious were they to get back to camp. Finally I told the Cree to leave me, and I would make out as best I could. I instructed him, that if the horses had gotten loose, to go on to camp and get them, and if I was able to make the trail at the top I would wait there for his return. Only a few feet could I ascend at a time, then I would have to stop to rest, so greatly did my heart pound. Finally as I neared the top, I heard the clatter of horses' hoofs and knew the guide was enroute back with the animals which had made off for the base camp. He told me that his mother, seeing the horses wander into camp, had at once started out on the trail with them to meet him, the Indian woman making the return journey afoot. I had thought I might perish out there in the cold, and this coupled with the fact that the country was infested with grizzlies did not make the prospect of a wait and climb very pleasant. It was dark when we finally rode into camp."

The experiences of the next few days are recounted thusly by Mr. Smith: "The day after we visited the 'home of the goats' the two doctors and their outfit left us, moving to another location. I was left alone in a tent, seven feet square, offering only sufficient room for my sleeping bag and duflies, and a few feet left to stand. Then came the snows, one after another. Nowhere to go outside the tent—the snow was too deep, and we were right up in the clouds, and could scarcely see a distance of 10 feet. Should one leave the tent and go ten paces, he would never see far enough to get back except by following his own footsteps. There was no one to see or to talk to but the two Cree Indians, whose tent was 50 paces away. There were seven such long, dreary days and nights of snow and more snow. Each night I spent, when not sleeping, in waiting to see what the morning would bring forth—whether we would be able to get down off the mountain. The Cree could not see the trail if we should have attempted it. Things were beginning to look worse, as wood for camp-fire was scarce, and what wood was to be had was some distance from camp, covered with snow. Likewise the food was getting low, and we couldn't go out in the snow and clouds to knock over a few grouse, or shoot a deer or caribou.

"Also the hobbled horses were getting restless, and we knew they might take a notion to go down the mountain, and leave us stranded, as there was no feed taken along for the animals. We had depended on them for foraging for food, and they had to paw away the snow to get any food. The Cree could hardly get to where they were thought to be to find them. Should he have attempted it and located them, his next problem would have been to follow his own tracks back to camp. No wonder the lonely sheep-herders and prospectors are said to go 'dippy,' for that length of time was a siege for us. Then too we had the thoughts that when we did reach we could not cross the East Pine River which had been crossed enroute out to the hunting country, because it was no doubt made a roaring torrent because of continued rain in the valley and snow on the mountains. We knew it would be too deep and on too much of a rampage to swim across with our horses and packs. We knew we would have to attempt another trail back, one more hazardous and over two mountains that offered but faded-out trails, used years ago by the Beaver Indians. We knew this trail was partly overgrown, and intersected with game trails. The young Cree did not know the trail, and his mother, having been over it but once and become lost, both were fearful of attempting it."

"But the second choice of return was the only one we could make, so at the end of a full week of camping in the snow atop Bull Moose Mountain, the Indians packed the horses and all of one day was spent in attempting the slippery descent, at points the trail being so steep and icy the horses stuck out their front feet, and tobogganed for several feet until they came to a stop. At times the trail was so bad," added Mr. Smith, "that we had to dismount and slide ourselves, to keep from going over the horses' necks."

Travelling for several more days in the intermittent rain and snow the trio finally reached the East Pine River they had crossed on the journey out. Taking a firm stand against any attempt to swim the horses across, the young Cree would not risk it. He likewise did not want to chance the "detour" over the "lost" trail, but Smith insisted on following the latter route and getting back to civilization. The Cree finally agreed to attempt the old trail, reminding the hunter that they were not to be blamed should they get lost. Starting off at two p. m., the squaw led the way for an hour, following the faded trail. Finally she lost it altogether, and for hours after they took what they thought would be a direct course across the mountain, not following any trail. Through snow and fallen timber they went, and before dark made the slope of the distant range. Looking down the squaw said "Lone Prairie," but shortly after the son informed the localite that his mother was not sure of their location. The Cree were excited and wandering, as they descended the East side of the mountain, all the time talking in the Cree language, finally admitting they were lost. Camp was again made for the night, and the following morning the younger Indian suggested that he and his mother go out to find the trail, before packing the animals. This method was followed and the trail was found, they having gone over another mountain and looked down on "Lone Prairie," with its ghost cabins.

Feeling now that their troubles were over, the three travelled all day and reached the East Pine trading post at night-fall. Hoping this might be the end of travel by horse-back, Mr. Smith asked the trader, who had been providing passage by truck to Dawson Creek, to take him in. The trader would not risk the journey, informing that the mud roads were so bad after the rains and snows that it was almost impossible to get through. Arrangement was then made for two saddle horses so Mr. Smith and the young Cree could proceed to Dawson Creek, the older Indian to return to her home at Moberly Lake with the remainder of the pack horses. The equipment was taken across the swollen stream by means of baskets attached to pulleys, and the trio made the safe passage on a type of ferry. Smith and the Cree then started off by saddle, with one pack horse, for the two-day journey to Dawson Creek. Reaching a habitation they were making arrangements for an overnight stay, when a government truck came through, and Smith was able to get a ride to his destination. "I thought every minute we would stop. We went over the entire 36 miles in mud and slush 20 inches deep. The trip took three hours, and mud piled on the running board. At one point the driver had to throw fir trees in ruts in order to gain a start. Arriving at Dawson Creek five days past the time I was due I again met a mining engineer I had met previous to starting into the mountains. He knew I was either lost or snow-bound, and informed me that if I had not arrived by the following day he planned to broadcast my plight on the government radio to which he had access."

There being but two trains weekly from Dawson Creek to Edmont, Smith was held up there for three days, it snowing on each day there, the first snow that had come to that immediate section. Enroute by train to Edmont he saw grain fields, mile upon mile, some not cut and some in shocks, but all covered with snow. Wild geese and ducks were alighting and feeding on the grain. "I wondered if so much snow had come by this time to the valley, what it must be like in the mountains we had left," pondered Mr. Smith. "I also wondered where my physician friends were."

That the Indian has a sense of humor is shown in a recounting of a hunt for bear. Says Mr. Smith: "One day while in a valley, we had made camp at one p. m., and ate our lunch. The weather had cleared somewhat, and the Cree suggested that we hunt for game and pictures. Saddling two horses, we rode off, and after an hour came to a meadow surrounded by trees, just at the base of a mountain. Riding into the belt of trees we saw the ground had been dug up, and immediately knew that a grizzly had been searching for roots to eat. As we passed through an opening the Cree said 'Look, grizzly!' Then I saw him coming through the belt of trees and looking us over. When I got my rifle out the bear high-tailed it. I shot and the bear spun around, but then gained speed. We got on our horses and followed the bear into another meadow, but he had vanished. The Cree in retracing our steps found blood spots on low foliage. Following this trail for a distance, we tethered our horses and the Cree said: 'We follow in after grizzly.' I said 'You go, I follow.' The Cree replied, 'Yes, worse for me, I ahead,' and I told him 'Yes, wounded grizzly will lay in thicket until first man come along, and jump out on him; then sometimes he is smart and circles and gets the last man.'"

The section where they followed into the woods after dismounting, proved almost impassable, it being necessary to crawl on hands and knees, and impossible to use rifles if need be. Feeling it was too dangerous, the two gave up the chase, and rode back to camp. They planned to return the following morning, and trace the blood stains, but the Cree decided the rain had washed out the trail. The squaw, however, was most anxious to go after the bear. Said Mr. Smith: "You can go but if you go, when we come to where the wounded bear went in you go first. Grizzly likes fat." To this the squaw replied, "No, you go first, grizzly likes bones."

With such a number of unusual, disheartening and fearful experiences behind him, Mr. Smith remarked about his safe return: "Never before did the comforts of home look so good to me as when I walked into my home at 3:30 p. m., on September 27th."

ward, Henry Elmer; 5th ward, Thomas Juno; 6th ward, John Hardy; North Bristol and the Landreth Manor section, Edgar Spencer. These various leaders will select their own collection committees and the drive will start this Saturday. Solicitors for the celebration will all wear official badge cards.

Two important committees were named last evening, the Prizes and Judges committee and the Parade Committee. Warren P. Snyder, Bristol's Superintendent of Schools, will head the Prizes and Judges committee, and he will be assisted by William Cooper, Henry Elmer, Paul Brown, J. S. Lynn, and Mulford Callanan.

William Mack was appointed chairman of the parade committee. Other members include: J. C. Schmidt, Jr., Wesley Spencer, Edgar Spencer, Paul Brown, William Terneson, A. W. Terneson, Samuel Shire, Thomas Juno, Joseph Martini, Frank Parr, Lillian Ebert and Elsie Lawrence.

Detailed reports from both committees are expected at the next meeting of the general committee meeting of the Association to be held next Monday evening at the Legion Home, 8:30.

The rain date for the parade was set as the following Monday, November 3rd.

Reports given last evening indicated that several bands and other groups have already signified their intentions of marching in the parade. One report indicated that the Bristol High School band will probably be marching. Several other groups from the High School are also expected to be entered. The senior drum and bugle corps of the Morrisville Legion Post will participate and it is believed that the band from the Morrisville High School will also participate.

Bristol's famous junior drum and bugle corps will be in the line of March and a senior drum and bugle corps from Burlington, N. J., is expected to participate. Word has also been received that the junior drum and bugle corps from Langhorne will parade. Special invitations will be sent to the Bensalem Township High School band, the Newtown High School Band and the St. Francis Industrial School band to participate in the parade and celebration.

Mrs. A. W. Terneson, representing the Daughters of America, told the committee last evening that this organization would probably have a group in the parade. Several other local groups have already signified their intentions of participating, including the Pocahontas and Red Men organizations from South Langhorne. All local industrial plants and mills will be asked to participate in the affair this year.

President Hardy urges all interested persons to attend the meeting of the general committee next Monday evening at the Legion Home on Radcliffe street, as this promises to be a very important meeting, with the announcement of cash prizes to be made then.
